THE STORY TELLIAN.

The Christmas Ball; OR, THE LOW-NECKED DRESS.

BY EVA MILFORD.

"I suppose, Miss. Montgomery, you will have your dress to come off the shoulders, shan't you.' This speech was made by Miss Brown, the fashionable dress-maker of our village, to Fanny Montgomery, who with her mother was presiding over the making of an elegant dress, in which Miss Fanny intended to shine at a Christmas ball, at which she particularly wished to appear well. The dress was now being fitted and

'Oh no, Fanny!' interposed Mrs. Montgomery, pray don't have it any lower than it now

'Mercy on me, Ma'am'!' hastily interrupted Miss Brown, that don't begin to be low enough. Why, the fashion plates that I have just received from Boston, are as much as two inches lower than that, and Miss Mason, Miss Scott and Miss Robertson all have had new dresses for this ball, and I cut all of them away of the shoulders-I'm sure Miss Fanny's neck is twice as handsome as either of theirs, and I don't see why she shouldn't show it.'

> THE IRISHMAN WHO WRESTLED WITH A BEAR

Among the early settlers in New Hampshire, a very stout Irishman strayed up into the town of Canterbury and built his shanfy. On the opposite side of the Merrimae there was a tavern, where there was kept some "old Jamaica," carvern resorted the settlers, on Saturday evening, to smoke a pipe, hear and tell the news, and drink his toddy; and among the rest, Pat was a regular visiter.

One brigh moonlight evening Pat was making his way to his shanty, in a rather zig-zag line. when he discovered an object in his way which seemed disposed to arrest his further progress, in the shape of a two-thirds grown bear. In addition to the above, they have purchased a set of patters, and the exclusive right of manufacturing and self-line patters, and the exclusive right of manufacturing and self-line patters, and the exclusive right of manufacturing and a set of patters, and the exclusive right of manufacturing and a set of patters, and the exclusive right of manufacturing and the use of Stables.

Mechanic vale Air Tight, which for beauty and simplicity of appearance, convenience in the arrangements, and economy of fuel—both for summer and winter, it must be conceded is the best Stove out!

They have also, nearly in a state of readiness for use, patterns for an Elegant Cast Iron Parlor Stove, which must ceipse anything else in the market.

These Stoves are being made from No. 1 Scotch Pigl Iron, and will not be liable to cancer of give out. But as certain plates of all Stoves fail before the rest, the fact that new plates can at any time be procured, and what would otherwise be a uscless stove, at a small expense made as good as new-in a consideration that must give the home manufactured article tother times being equal) a decided preference over these manufactured at a distance.

All kands of Sheet Fron, Tin and Copper Ware for an inshed as above at the shortest notice; and the whole color of the same deprecation of the manufactured at a distance.
